

Practical PRIESTESS

Cindy Morris,^{MSW}
Author, Speaker, and Counselor-at-Large

Cindy Morris,^{MSW}

Everything I learned about business I learned because I had to.

I owned, operated, and ultimately sold a thriving retail flower business in Boulder, Colorado over the course of ten years.

With my eclectic educational background, a B.S. in Horticulture from Cornell University and a Masters in Social Work from Boston University, I found I used both degrees equally in my business. To my surprise it was my family systems training in Social Work that helped me most in business and guided me towards the writing of my book, the speaking I do with groups, and individual counseling work I do.

I saw how business is an extension of the family system, how we behave in our families and how we conduct ourselves in our lives is exactly how we do so in business as well.

Learning to make empowered, healthy decisions for our businesses and the business of our lives is what creates balance and harmony in our lives. We do this by connecting to Spirit and living that connection in all that we do. That is living in our Priestess energy ~ serving our connection to Spirit in our work.

Compiling the life and work experiences I have had over the past 30 years I have developed a tool box for empowerment that I call the Priestess Principles. These 5 simple (not easy, but simple) tenets create the foundation for living a life as an empowered Priestess. No matter what the work is, when it is directed by our relationship to our higher selves, it is Priestess work: empowering, inspiring, and uplifting.

I presently enjoy a busy counseling business and I write, write, write. Visit <http://priestessentrepreneur.com/wordpress> to read the Priestess Chronicles, musings of a modern-day Priestess. Life from a Priestess Point of View is an endless opportunity to learn, to grow, and to become more committed to knowing yourself. When you know yourself you make better decisions for yourself, making your world a better place to live.

No doubt about it... We ALL want that.